

I live in a rural part of Nebraska and would be very disturbed to see any limitations placed on satellite radio. With a limited choice of where to receive my radio music and news, satellite radio is a critical part of my day-to-day life. I am also opposed to limiting XM's ability to broadcast traffic and weather reports. The economic viability of the XM service is important to me because I want this service to remain available and affordable for people such as myself in rural areas. In my opinion, satellite radio is a subscription service that should have the freedom to provide whatever service it wishes without unnecessary government intrusion.
